The Ophthalmic Photographers' Society

The Ophthalmic Photographers' Society (OPS) is a nonprofit international organization dedicated to the advancement of photography as applied to ophthalmology and visual science. Our membership, numbering over 1,000, includes a broad spectrum of professionals in eye health care, including ophthalmologists, optometrists, photographers, nurses, ophthalmic medical personnel, and basic researchers. The Society's educational programs, designed to supplement the professional expertise of our members, have earned the OPS recognition as being an organization dedicated to the elevation of standards in the craft. The Society's major publication, The Journal of Ophthalmic Photography, presents tutorials and articles on photographic techniques, instrumentation, and related topics in ophthalmology. Visit us online at www.opsweb.org.
